Get Involved 2 37

Get Involved!

The youth in all 4 participating communities of Nairobi identified elements of youth culture that were strengths to Nairobi, as well as opportunities to address some of their concerns. They also had plenty of ideas on how to address these concerns. Here are some ideas they came up with:

What can youth do to be more engaged themselves?

“Some times there is low cooperation and involvement amongst youth, and youth don’t seem to take initiative on their own.”
–Jafary Kunambi

- Be confident and self-aware.
- Educate yourself on issues that matter to you: check out your ward executive office for sources of information!
- Share your ideas with others: that includes both youth and adults.
- Visit your local government and municipal government offices.
- Come prepared to meetings where youth have a chance to be heard.
- Take initiative: use the resources that are available to you, and look for more services or assets!

What can communities and community members do to support youth?

“We want to get involved in decision making processes in the local government.” –Stanclaus Kyando

- Involve youth in decision making processes:
 - Communicate when and where important community meetings (including political meetings) are being held. Try communicating through some of the youth services in this guide.
 - Make sure government offices and meetings are youth friendly; ask yourself: would you feel welcome in these places if you were a youth?
 - Provide youth with opportunities speak, listen to what they are saying, and integrate these ideas into planning processes.

Introduction

Youth are an integral and large part of the population of Nairobi. They make up nearly 50% of the approximately 3 million inhabitants of the city. When youth are engaged with their communities, in NGOs, as peer educators, and in income generating groups, they are contributing to a more sustainable and a safer city. These youth are less likely to commit crimes and remain idle.

This Youth City Guide is a jumping-off point for identifying and developing services which are tailored to youth needs. Based on discussion in workshops, meetings, and during field work, the youth involved in this project identified key issues where youth search out support and information.

These youth in Nairobi are most concerned about:

- access to basic and post-secondary education
- formal skill development (vocational training)
- access to information
- employment and income generation
- access to health services, particularly for HIV/AIDS and drug abuse

“Youth-Friendly services are places or services where youth are able to get service for their problems in a friendly and timely manner, independently (without accompaniment), without fear or conditionality and with confidentiality. They are ideally services where peers are the service providers and where youth participate in the decision making of how services are provided and exactly which services are provided.”
- Collaborative definition created by youth in Dar es Salaam, Tanzania

The Nairobi Youth City Guide contains locations and information on places the youth of 4 regions in Tanzania have identified as ‘Youth Friendly,’ along with ways youth and communities can address barriers to youth service provision. Take a look inside! You’ll see that throughout Nairobi, youth have identified services in Education, Employment, Finances, Information Access, Health, Recreation, and Religion that either address the issues they are concerned about or have the potential to address these issues. Take a look to see where you can get involved, and what’s in your city for youth! As a youth or an adult, can you help develop some of these assets and services to meet the needs of youth?

The Moonbeam Training Centre for Youth was founded after UN Secretary General Ban Ki Moon visited the Nairobi slum of Kibera and pledged to do something to help. The Moonbeam training centre has been located in Mavoko on the outskirts of Nairobi on land purchase by UN-HABITAT. Youth from Kibera and other slums have been training in brick making and housing construction. They have been responsible for building the training centre and will begin construction on low-income housing cooperatives in Mavoko. Youth participants were trained in asset mapping in October 2009. They mapped locally available services in order to be able to provide this information to the families that will eventually be living in the area. This information will also be beneficial to the youth, who will become private contractors once the housing project is complete and they will need to know where to purchase their supplies. It is the intention of the youth at Moonbeam to update the maps as the community expands and develops.
